Key Takeaways

The price of a molded cable tray cover machine typically starts around $40,000 and can increase depending on customization, production capacity, and features. Molded cable tray cover machines are automated systems designed to manufacture cover plates for cable tray systems efficiently and accurately. These machines usually feature PLC control systems, hydraulic cutting, and can handle steel thicknesses of 1–2mm with a production speed of 10–15 meters per minute.

They are customizable in terms of size, color, and voltage, with standard power requirements around 3KW and 380V. Pricing depends on several factors: Automation level: Fully integrated systems combining roll forming, punching, and bending are more expensive. Customization: Machines tailored to specific tray sizes, thicknesses, or production speeds can increase costs.

Build quality: Sturdy steel construction and advanced mold designs add to the price. Supplier and region: Prices vary between manufacturers and countries, with Chinese OEM suppliers often offering competitive rates starting at $40,000 for standard models. For high-volume production or specialized requirements, requesting a full quote from suppliers is recommended to account for shipping, installation, and after-sales support.
