F-

S 450mm 16 AWG jumper wires are available, with prices influenced by quantity and shipping tariffs (8–10% for U. S. shipments). Shorter or thinner wires, such as 18 AWG, generally cost less per unit.

Amazon lists antenna pigtail connectors and jumper cables, often sold individually or in packs. Prices for these can range from $2 to $10 per cable, depending on the connector type, material quality, and certification (e.g., Global Recycled Standard). Bulk packs may reduce the per-unit cost.

Factors Affecting Price

Length and Gauge: Longer cables and thicker wires (lower AWG numbers) cost more due to higher material usage. Connector Type: Specialized connectors (e.g., F-S, F-F, or SMA pigtails) increase cost. Quantity: Buying in bulk often reduces the per-unit price.

Shipping and Tariffs: U. S. shipments may incur tariffs of 8–38% depending on the product and supplier. Material and Certification: Cables with higher-quality materials or environmental certifications (e.g., GRS) may be priced higher.

Summary

For typical electronics or antenna applications, expect to pay between $0. 50 and $5 per pigtail jumper cable, with higher-end specialty cables reaching $10 or more. Checking suppliers like Mouser, DigiKey, and Amazon allows comparison of lengths, gauges, connector types, and bulk pricing to find the best option for your needs.
